CRESCENT SPRINGS TREE CRISIS

We see it every day! The tree canopy in Crescent Springs and our region is under attack and dying. This is caused by a variety and combination of natural and man-made causes (adverse weather, nasty invasive insects and plants, and development). To counter this problem each property owner and resident can assist and your help is needed.

Replanting native trees on your land and helping out with replanting projects in our public city spaces is a good, first step. The Taking Root Project in Greater Cincinnati proposes we all consider and meet a lofty goal to replant 2 million trees in the Greater Cincinnati region by 2020.

Please consider assisting in this effort. Encourage City Council to replant trees in the Community Park. You can assist financially or by engaging in-kind work in any replanting project. The City needs your lending hand, especially interested, engaged residents to actively be involved by joining the City Tree Commission.

Working together now - our children, grandchildren and future Crescent Springs residents will be forever grateful.
